Left Parties Greet CPC

CPI(M) general secretary Sitaram Yechury wrote to Xi Jinping, the Chinese Premier and general secretary of the CPC, in which he said that the history of the last century holds testimony to the manner in which China has evolved its policies, often identifying and correcting its mistakes.

“The CPI(M) continues to underline that Marxism-Leninism is a creative science. It is supremely anti-dogmatic. It can never be reduced to a set of formulae,” Mr. Yechury wrote.

He also applauded China for its handling of the COVID-19 pandemic. The pandemic, the CPI (M) leader said, came at a time when the global economy was already slowing down and moving towards recession. “International finance capital-led imperialist neoliberal globalisation is showing its total bankruptcy in providing any solution,” Mr. Yechury wrote.

CPI general secretary D. Raja also commended Chinese President Xi Jinping for leading China to become a major economic power, to intervene and cooperate on any international development.

He also applauded China for its handling of the pandemic and extending help to other countries.

While appreciating the all-round development of China, Mr. Raja, however, sounded a word of caution on the current strained Indo-China relationship.

The border dispute that had been going on since India’s Independence needed to be solved, Mr. Raja said. “We do believe we have to solve this problem now through peaceful means so that our both countries can play a meaningful role to realise the peace and stability in the region and work together for the establishment of an equitable global order in international relations.”
