

For Critical Observation

It has been one of our basic understandings that the event of 15th August 1947 was one of Transfer of Power to the Indian Comprador big bourgeoisie and landlord classes and that the Indian Independence was formal and continues to be so.

“August 15, 1947 was the beginning of Political independence of our country. But the successive Congress governments have subordinated themselves to the imperialist that it has become nominal Janata regime was an exception in the sense that it attempted to assert marginal independence. Therefore the struggle for independence against the two super powers in general and Soviet Union in particular is going on in our country”.

“With no revolutionary democratic elements (proletariat) and no revolutionary programme, the national movement becomes relatively revolutionary when it is composed of and led by reactionary elements like feudal or bourgeoisie opposed to socialism. It is revolutionary to the extent it is anti-imperialist”.
